

ABSTRACT

5 An inventive electronic circuit includes a controller for processing a processor task as well as an energy determination means for determining the energy available to the controller. A control means of the electronic circuit controls the controller depending on the energy available to the controller. An optimum utilization of the energy 10 available and, thus, an optimization of the computing speed with maximum energy utilization is achieved by means of the energy control.